Revolution In Eating

has been brought about by the introduction of COTTOLENE, the new vegetable shortening. The discovery of this product, and the demonstration of its remarkable qualities, has attracted the widest interest. Hitherto the common shortening has been lard, or indifferent butter. Every one has probably suffered occasional discomfort from lard-cooked food: while it is well known that thousands are obliged to abstain entirely from everything of that kind. To such people, COTTOLENE is of peculiar value, widening as it does, the range of what may be eaten and enjoyed. COTTOLENE is a cooking marvel. It combines with the food-imparts to it a tempting color, a delicate flavor, and an appetizing crispness. No trace of greasiness remains to offend the taste, or disturb the digestion.

COTTOLENE is worthy of the careful notice of all those who value good food, of itself or for its hygienic properties.

TELEGRAMS TO THE STAR.

ALL THEY WANT IS PEACE.

Merchants at Santos Not Taking Sides in the Brazilian Quarrel NEW YORK, Jan. 3 .- Capt. Fisher of the steamer Strabo, from Santos, Brazil, reports that there is little if any excitement at Santos. The merchants seemed anxious only for an opportunity to conduct their business in peace. Politics seemed to be a tacitly tabooed topic. There were quite a large number of soldiers stationed there, but Capt. Fisher heard of no collisions between them and the civilians. There were no warships in the harbor of Santos. At Victoria and Bahia everything was quiet. It was impossible to learn the real sentiments of the people because of the fear of the soldiery. On December 29 the Stabo passed the United States cruiser New York, bound to St. Lucia. Capt. Fisher was indignant because the cruiser utterly ignored his sig-nals and salute. He says that in twenty-five years of sea-faring life this is the first time that he has known any man-of-war to neglect the recognized courtesies of the Capt. Fisher of the steamer Strabo

Capt. Fisher of the steamer Strabo brought further details from St. Lucia of the wreck of the ship Volga at that port.

The Volga left Calcutta on September 11, with 160 coolies for St. Lucia and 483 for Jamaica; also a cargo of 500 tons of rice and 1,825 tons of linseed. She touched at St. Helena for provisions on November 11, and had made St. Lucia at noon December 10, when she struck on the rocks at the entrance to the harbor. Every kind of sailing and rowing craft put off for the scene of the stranding, which was less than two miles from the wharves.

The coolies were crouching about the decks, paralyzed with fear. They would listen only to the orders of Dr. Goodridge, the ship's surgeon.

With the assistance of the boats from the amer Honiton, the government tug ige and the steamer Assistance of the Midge and the steamer Assistance of the St. Lucia Steam Conveyance Company fleet the 643 panic-stricken women and children and forty-five crew were all safely landed before midnight, though not without minor accidents.

The coolies were a charitable charge upon the authorities until the arrival of the next ship of the same line.

PROF. SHORTLIDGE RAVING. His Mental Unsoundness Has Become More Pronounced.

MEDIA, Pa., Jan. 3.-Friends of Prof. Swithin C. Shortlidge, who shot and killed his wife Sunday while insane from grip, have applied to Judge Clayton to appoint a commission in lunacy to inquire into the unfortunate man's condition. Prof. Shortlidge's mental unsoundness was more pronounced yesterday than at any time since the shooting. He raved in his cell and tore at the bars of the doors continually, and at the same time he kept up a crying and a moaning that was piteous to hear. DELAYED BY HEAVY GALES.

Arrival of the Egyptain Monarch After 24 Days From London.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.-The long overque steamer Egyptian Monarch of the Wilson line arrived at the bar at noon, having been twenty-four days out from London. A good deal of anxiety has been expressed about the steamer, as she usually makes the passage in fourteen days, and is consequently ten days overdue.

Her delay was caused by a succession of heavy gales and high head sea. The ship arrived in good condition, and all on board are well.

THE INCOME TAX.

Views of Chairman Wilson of the Ways and Means Committee. NEW YORK, Jan. 3.-The North American Review for January contains a paper on "Income Tax" by William L. Wilson chairman of the ways and means committee, from which the following is an extract: "The place of the income tax in the English system has been stated by Mr. Noble in his National Finance, as follows: "The enormous service which it has ren dered in the liberation of trade from a multitude of onerous and oppressive burdens, has been already referred to. Its existence has rendered possible the great reform of our system of indirect taxation, which has been the foundation of our modern commercial progress.

It has the transcendent merit over duties of customs and excise that it does not interfere with the processes of industry or the course of trade, and that the whole amount which it costs the taxpayer is devoted to the service of the state. It is at of which any substantial contribution is levied from the increasing wealth of the country, and its repeal without a substitute would aggregate the pressure of taxation upon those classes which are least able to bear the burden. It has its inequalities, but they are by no means so flagrant and unjust as the inequalities of indirect taxa tion.

"But despite these strong arguments in favor of an individual income tax, and the unquestionable equity of its general theory, there are very grave counter reasons which rise up before a legislature who seeks to embody it into our federal tax system. Aside from the very natural objection of those who might have to pay such a tax, its administration is necessarily accompanied by some extras and some demoralizing incidents. "Our people have so long and so generally their personal incomes and even from any personal contact with federal tax collectors that they resent the approach of either. "Moreover, like the personal property tax, which is so universally evaded, a personal income tax, would easily lend itself to fraud, concealment and perjury, and proves, as Mr. Mills said, a tax upon con-

been free from any public scrutiny into science. And, finally, in a country of the large geographical dimensions of the United States it would be difficult to put into effective working order the necessary machinery for its thorough collection."

tahs," he said, "I want to tell you a story of a battle between English mastiffs and a thoroughbred Ceylonese cheetah. There is a very general impression that the cheetah and the royal Bengal tiger are just about the same thing, but this isn't so. The main difference in them is that the former is not so blood-thirsty as the latter. Right down in his heart he is not a man-eater, but he can digest that kind of meat when occasion requires. As rule, he will give the human brotherhood a wide berth, but if you corner him there is no telling how hard he can fight. Stir him up, and he will make the fur fly in a fast and furious fashion. He has been known to lie in wait along the mountain roads for human prev. but these instance present almost the only impost by means are rare, and his manivorous taste is not very highly developed. There are many authentic statements recorded where cheetahs, at certain seasons of the year, have appeared in the mountain villages, generilly seeking the fires which have been lighted for cooking purposes on the hard earth floors of the rude huts. Then the population migrate, leave the cheetah to his glory and report at the neighboring village that the animals are working havoc among the hogs and humans. On one occasion of this kind, Capt. Baker, the great oriental sportsman, made an investigation on the spot, shot a cheetah as it stood before the fireplace in a hut, and made the discovery that the animal had sought the discovery that the animal had sought the warmth because of a peculiar disease of the jaws and teeth. On examining the mouth of the dead cheetah he saw that the gums were full of maggots, and these, when warmed by the fire, would crawl far enough out of the sockets of the teeth to be reached by the cheetah's claws. There was a coffee planter who lived near Kandy, whose bungalow was in the mountains, and whose name was Dawson. He had a number of fine China pigs, which became the apple of the cheetah's eye. The feline tribesman made nightly calls, and the porkers were borne off one by one. Attempts to shoot the intruder failed. Two English mastiffs, belonging to a neighboring to shoot the intruder failed. Two English mastiffs, belonging to a neighboring planter, were invited over and placed in the piggery. Dawson, his neighbor and myself wrapped ourselves in heavy coats, for the nights in those parts are very chill, and climbed into a crow's nest, which had been built in a tree top near by. The early hours of the night were as dark as Erebus and lagged painfully, the oppressive stillness being now and then broken by the cry of some wild denizen of the jungle. Toward 1 o'clock the pale light of the moon flickered through the dense foliage. Cooped up in the nest, we were half asleep, when, up in the nest, we were half asleep, when, with a cat-like screech, a magnificent cheetah bounded over the palings of the inclosure, and for an instant crouched to take a survey of the situation. The mastiff closest the outside, and very near as large as the cat, bounded at him, and was struck dead with a single blow from the cheetah. which then quietly approached the pen. The other mastiff, a female, doubly enraged at the fate of her mate, with a terrific growl, fastened her fangs deep in the throat of the cat. A red-hot fight followed. With screeches, hisses and growis, the cat and dog rolled over and over, the cheetah making desperate efforts to break the dog's hold, but it was no go. The mastiff had noud, but it was no go. The mastiff had come to stay. Dawson got down from the nest in quick order, and with a well-aimed pistol shot sent the cheetah to its last, long home. The dog was horribly injured, it having been literally disemboweied by the claws of the great cat. She was sent via rail to the Marine Hospital at Colombo, sewed up and carefully nursed back to health. The cheetah measured seven and one half feet from the end of his nose to the tip of his tail, and was about the larg-est ever killed in that district. I tell you, sir, the cheetah is a cat from away back.

No dog is anything like a match for it in a fair fight. The cheetah is a worthy kinsman of the Bengal tiger, and with the latter animal no lion is to be compared in strength, agility or fighting qualities.

Then the minister arose and announced in a pleased manner that it gave him great pleasure to receive so goodly a sum, but that it was not all, as a charitable brother had agreed to give double the amount of the collection. At this all heads turned in the direction of the parsimonious man. Some persons tittered and the individual grew red and exceedingly angry. A large crowd of unemployed men and omen filled the street in front of the Bethel, where they have for some time received their supply of provisions from day to day, yesterday at Cleveland, Ohio. isted between the towns of Dayton and Frazier. The conflicts between the citizens of both places have been wordy, and Monday night a dance was in progress in the village hall at Dayton, and nearly half of the people of the town were present. The dance was at its zenith, when with loud hallooing and noise enough to frighten a regiment of soldiers, a great crowd of miners from Frazier flocked to the hall. Their companions were on the outside, and once they had entered the women present were driven terror-stricken from the hall. once they had entered the women present were driven terror-stricken from the hall. The men, as soon as they could leave their tormentors, hastened home and secured their rifles. Gathering in the public square they met to devise the best way to drive the miners from the town. City Marshal Lawson was laboring with a gang of the miners. He was begging them to be quiet and go home. Some one drew a revolver and fired, the bullet entering the officer's stomach, killing him instantly. It is supported by voluntary contributions, the average collections at the church in question ranging generally at about $20.

Quite recently the clergyman announced that on the following Sunday the church would take the annual collection for the support of the charity, and he hoped it would be a generous one. After the service the parsimonious member, in a burst of surprising generosity, informed the clergyman privately that he would double the amount of the collection for his favorite charity.

Entirely unconscious of what the result might be, the minister permitted this information to leak out. Among others it reached the ears of a well-to-do member of the congregation, the man against whom the grievance is now lodged. As the latter well knew the close disposition of the brother member, he at once saw an opportunity to secure from him a donation commensurate with his means.

He whispered the information to others as willing as he to see the fun through. Sunday arrived and with it the hour for the collection. The minister in his announcement urged a liberal donation, and the deacons began to pass the plates. To the astonishment of those not in the secret, where men had been in the habit of contributing dimes they now gave dollars, and when the plates were laid at the foot of the nulnit the average collections at the church in

A REPORTER MAKES AN INVESTIGATION

The loss of life during the past week has been very great. Half of the deaths were due to ignor ance and carelessness.

Homeopathic Remedy Company, 1838 G stree northwest, to ascertain the facts about wonderft cures this company claims to be making, was sur-prised at the large crowd of people that he found In response to a question by the reporter, one of the leading promoters of this enterprise said: "The central thought of this new movement is to strip every expense from medical examinations. Any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here to the best advice of eminent physicians. Our reme-dies can be had at any drug store or at this office, and are sold mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

"Oh! no; we don't pretend that we can cun every disease, but there are certain diseases that this company positively guarantees to cure. For instance, dyspepsia and stomach troubles. Last month we sold over 14,000 bottles of our dyspepsia cure, and every bottle was guaranteed to give sabcure, and every bottle was guaranteed to give natisfaction or money refunded. Again, take our rheumatic remedy, which sells for 25 cents a bottle.
This cure is guaranteed to cure any form of rheumatism or money refunded. As you will see by this case book, we have treated and cured over 8,000 people in the last ten months. In fact, I've known and fired, the bullet entering the officer's stomach, killing him instantly.

In a moment the news of his shooting was carried to the men in the public square. They hastened to the restaurant, and there, outside in the dark, a bloody battle with knives and revolvers took place. Frank Doud, deputy United States marshal, under President Harrison, was horribly injured. John Gustafson, a prominent man of the town, was literally cut to places. persons who have been afflicted for years with rheumatism to be cured by a 25-cent bottle. Ca tarrh is another disease which has baffled the skill of most physicians, and yet we can prove by over 7,000 living witnesses whom we have cured that our catarrh remedy is not only soothing and pleas-der President Harrison, was horribly injured. John Gustafson, a prominent man of the town, was literally cut to pieces. He was in the thick of the riot, and men were falling around him, all more or less injured, when he went down.

The battle was furiously fought for half an hour, the two factions, Dayton folks and the miners, swaying back and forth as first one side made a rally and then the other having an advantage. When the fray was over half a dozen persons on each side were injured and one was killed.

Yesterday armed guards patrolled the streets of Dayton. Eight of the rioters were arrested and started for Fort Dodge. The people of Dayton had their homes barricaded nearly all day. The excitement which commenced with the dance last night continued without abatement until the sun went down.
